THE MASS MEETINGS.

Whatever may be its result, the Mormons may well be proud of their work on Saturday. At various places in the Territory they assembled in vast gatherings, and exercising their rights as freemen and citizens of the Republic, formulated a statement of their grievances and upon this declaration of undeniable facts, solemnly protested against a continuance of the persecutions to which they have been and are subjected, earnestly appealing to the National Administration to come to their relief. They did not assume the mean attitude of supplicants for mercy, but as honest men and women simply and manfully asked for their rights—for what they could demand as loyal members of the national commonwealth, devoted to their country and its institutions. The "Declaration," which appears in full in this issue of THE HERALD, is a paper that will commend itself for its fairness, honesty and truthfulness; it is a plain statement of the case, and so careful has been the committee in its preparation, that no part of the presentation, no assertion in it can be gainsaid or disproven. The speeches also in the Tabernacle, this city, were able, earnest and effective; they were what might be called "telling" addresses. They were devoid of everything of a sensational character, there having been no straining for effect, no attempt to tickle the ears and excite the clamor of the populace. While the speakers showed by their manner and words that they were in deep earnest, filled full of the matter, their language was temperate and their speech modest and truthful. No one can say what will come from this popular appeal to the nation for rights that have been denied, for relief from this wicked, this malicious oppression. Nothing or good may result from this honest effort to obtain relief from the persecution and outrages which are bringing so much distress upon the afflicted people. Whatever may be the outcome, the people have done wisely and well. THE HERALD believes that their appeal will be heeded, and that the nation will soon demand that Mormons be accorded their rights as citizens.

LAW FOR MORMONS ONLY.

Does Chief Justice Zane want people to understand that only Mormons are guilty of offenses against the law? Does he desire it understood that only Mormons will be punished in his court? Is his malice against Mormons so intense and overpowering that he is blinded to the offenses and immoralities of others? It looks very much as if all this were what His Honor was hankering for and is. Some time ago a man was committed for trial on the charge of unlawful cohabitation with his wife's sister. The evidence of guilt was a child, the fruit of the liaison; the fellow has been in prison, being unable to furnish a bail bond; on Saturday he was taken before His Honor on a writ of habeas corpus, and the Chief Justice promptly ordered his release, holding that the accused was guilty of no offense punishable by law, though if cohabiting with one's sister-in-law, the wife living with the husband at the same time, does not come within the operation of the third section of the Edmunds Act, then it would be hard to say what is unlawful cohabitation. We may explain that the accused in this case is not a Mormon.

At a gathering of colored men in Washington, the other day, the ancient negro, Fred Douglass, delivered a speech, in the course of which he savagely attacked the Republican party, saying that in the late campaign it had ceased to be the party of moral ideas, and had sought victory on grounds far below its ordinary level. It had made national pelf more important than the national party. He praised President Cleveland, declaring that the words of his inaugural were equal to those of Lincoln. Just how deeply rooted are Douglass' political principles will be understood when it is stated that he holds a fat Federal office, which was given him by a Republican President in order to please the colored people and hold the negro vote. Douglass, as a matter of course, wants to hold on to the office, and is willing to become as good a Democrat as he has always been a Republican. Cleveland will neglect a duty which he owes to himself, his party and the country if he fails to "bounce" all such officials as Douglass, white or black.

VENOM ON THE BENCH.

If proof were needed of the vindictive, vicious character of Chief Justice Zane, and of his wicked bigotry on the bench, it was furnished on Saturday. When His Honor was passing sentence upon Pratt, who had pleaded guilty to unlawful cohabitation, Zane fairly shook with hate and rage when the defendant refused to get down in the dirt and crawl on his belly before the Judge. His Honor's countenance was livid, his voice trembled with passion, his lips twitched with the frenzy that had taken possession of him, and the excited, nervous movement of the limbs manifested the cholera that had the mastery of the Court. In pronouncing the sentence of imprisonment, the Chief Justice not only went to the full limit of the law, but in his malice and rancor, added "at hard labor," which the statute does not permit, and which he had to retract, though it was apparent that he did so reluctantly. It is rare indeed that such an exhibition of venom on the bench is seen, and we hope never to witness it like again. If His Honor could have increased the sentence without limit, and added villainous tortures to it, it was plain he would have done so. The law is not vengeful, and never operates upon the theory of malice, or in a spirit of vindictiveness; but Chief Justice Zane proves by his course on the bench that he is full of malice, and bubbling over with venom and hate. He is not a proper person to preside in a court of justice.

CHIEF JUSTICE ZANE having made it a practice to question men who plead guilty to the charge of unlawful cohabitation as to their future intentions, the impression has been created that this is a legitimate and proper proceeding, and that the parties are obliged to answer. It might as well be understood that it is none of Judge Zane's business what a man intends to do; these parties are not on trial for their intentions, and cannot be punished for them. It would be just as proper and no more impudent to frankly tell His Honor when he asks what the accused intends to do in the future, that it is none of his business, with all the emphasis you care to apply to the answer, as it is for him to ask the question. The law limits the punishment which His Honor can inflict, and while the line is drawn far inside the venomous desires of the judge, he cannot increase the infliction upon a man who knows his rights and privileges and is manly enough to maintain them, even in the presence of a Chief Justice.

"Thomas Curtis and wife" is the entry that the man in the case made on a hotel register in Wisconsin, when he and the woman arrived for a night's sojourn at the hotel. The woman, however, wasn't his wife. Curtis gave the clerk $100 for safe keeping, and the latter, absconded with the money, whereupon Curtis sued the hotel. The Supreme Court of the State has decided that the hotel is not liable, saying the plaintiff was not a guest in the legal sense, for the reason that he had gone to the hotel to stay but one night for an improper purpose, hence he was not entitled to the rights or protection due a guest. The opinion adds that if the hotel keeper had known of Curtis' purpose he might have refused him admission, or having learned the truth "incontinently turned the plaintiff and the woman with him into the street, or have called the police and had them arrested."

THE PHILADELPHIA Times has collected and published figures showing that in the City of Brotherly Love, for the year ended March 31, the consumption of fermented liquors amounted to 1,273,501 barrels, or 528,776,416 glasses. This is equal to about 500 glasses for every man, woman and child in the city, or nearly two glasses a day apiece all round. The Times adds that "it will hardly be denied that some few of the million population of Philadelphia have managed during the past year to put away a much larger daily average than that."

UNPRECEDENTED DISASTER to railroad property in this country is what the Railway Age predicts for 1885. It points out that last year thirty-seven roads went into the hands of receivers, the aggregate capital stock being $715,000,000. During the first three months of this year twenty-three roads failed, their total value amounting to $275,000,000. The Age attributes most of the trouble to building the roads before they were needed.

THE WILL of the late Hon. Thomas Hedge, of Franklin, Pa., has a codicil providing that "should any of the officials of the Venango National Bank become conscience-stricken and conclude to return to his executors the $55,000 they stole from him, he bequeaths that sum to the cemetery." It is hardly probable that the thieves will be conscience-stricken.
